

Sixteen revolutions, 144,178 elites who lived through one

Seventeen revolutions were considered and sixteen clear the floor of 500 elites with 200 spanning two sectors. Only the Haitian Revolution falls out, at 39 elites, which is a fact about what encyclopaedic sources record. Cohorts run from 518 people (the Meiji Restoration) to 54,018 (the German Revolution), a hundredfold spread that follows the coverage of the database far more than the size of the revolution, so cohort sizes are not comparable across the set. Age composition is steadier: the 20-35 band is the largest in ten of the sixteen and the 36-55 band in the other six.
